International music sensation Celtic Woman has just announced a series of Australian stops during its 2015 world concert tour celebrating the group's 10th anniversary together. Following two hugely successful Australian tours Celtic Woman is returning by popular demand and they can't wait to bring their new show to our shores with tickets going on sale this Friday. "We've been dying to get back to Australia," says singer Susan McFadden. "It's long overdue and next year is a really special year as it's Celtic Woman's 10th Anniversary so we can't wait to come and perform everyone's favourite songs." It was a decade ago that Celtic Woman first introduced millions of new fans to the group's fresh fusion of Irish musical tradition, contemporary song craft and state-of-the-art stage production. Since then, Celtic Woman's uplifting music has touched the hearts of a devoted global audience that's embraced the group's massively popular public television specials and made the group's CDs and DVDs into multi-platinum best-sellers.
